CONVENIENCE:

Kevin Beirne is Delighted under instruction of the owners to bring to market this unique piece of property steeped in Irish History. The lands at Drumaduff features just over 10 acres of mature deciduous and evergreen trees. The land also contains the ruins of a period residence that once was a fine piece of contemporary architecture when built in the 19th century. The house and grounds originally belonged to the Fitzgerald family who relocated from Kilkenny to Mayo as part of the Cromwellian Settlement. Sheila Fitzgerald, a writer and artist of some renown, was the widow of Gerald Fitzgerald who was the last Fitzgerald owner of the house and grounds. Sheila was from a Donegal, the freethinking daughter of the aristocratic Goold Verschoyle family who were well-known at one time, and her story has been documented by the writer Dermot Bolger, mainly in the books "The Family on Paradise Pier" and "An Ark of Light".
